

Press Release – ESGO to host High-Level Policy Event at the European Parliament calling for EU action to close gaps in women’s health

Brussels, 28 January 2026 – The European Society of Gynaecological Oncology (ESGO) will today host a High-Level Policy Event at the European Parliament, from 12:00 to 14:00, focused on addressing persistent unmet needs and inequalities in women’s health and gynaecological cancer care across Europe.

The event, entitled “Addressing women’s health unmet needs through collaboration and excellence”, is hosted by Members of the European Parliament Vytėnė Povilaitė, Romana Jerković, and Tilly Metz, and brings together policymakers, European Commission representatives, patient advocates and leading health stakeholders.

Taking place at a pivotal moment for EU policymaking – with the forthcoming Gender Equality Strategy 2026–2030, ongoing reflections on Europe’s health priorities, and discussions on the future Multiannual Financial Framework (MFF) – the event aims to contribute concrete, evidence-based proposals to strengthen women’s health policy at EU level.

Despite scientific progress, women affected by gynaecological cancers continue to face major disparities in access to prevention, early diagnosis, specialist treatment, innovation and survivorship care depending on where they live. These gaps undermine equity, outcomes and the sustainability of healthcare systems across Europe.

At the centre of the discussion is ESGO’s newly published position paper, “Closing the Gap in Women’s Health: Building an EU-wide Ecosystem of Centres of Excellence”, which sets out a clear call to action for EU institutions, Member States and stakeholders. The paper calls for:

- the establishment of an integrated EU-wide ecosystem of Centres of Excellence for Women’s Health, building on existing EU initiatives and infrastructures;
- sustainable financing and governance models for women’s health services;
- the embedding of equity and gender sensitivity as core principles of cancer and women’s health policy;
- the strengthening and formal recognition of the gynaecological oncology workforce; and
- the development of robust data, research and learning systems centred on women’s needs.

The event will feature contributions from the European Commission, including DG JUST, and from patient advocates, notably the European Network of Gynaecological Cancer Advocacy Groups (ENGAGe), represented by Anne De Middelaer. ESGO’s leadership will present the proposed model for Centres of Excellence, with interventions from Anna Fagotti, ESGO President, Jalid Sehoul, ESGO President-elect, and concluding remarks by Maja Pakiz, ESGO Vice President.

The discussion will also be enriched by contributions from a broad and aligned coalition of European and international stakeholders active across women’s health, cancer, research and policy. These include European and international medical and scientific organisations, such as the International Federation of Gynecology and Obstetrics (FIGO), the European Board and College of Obstetrics and Gynecology (EBCOG) and the European Society of Human Reproduction and Embryology (ESHRE); European cancer and patient organisations, including the European Cancer Organisation (ECO), Cancer Patients Europe (CPE) and the Association of European Cancer Leagues (ECL); clinical and research centres and innovation networks, notably Erasmus Medical Center and the Netherlands Women's Health Research & Innovation Center; as well as policy and research institutes, including the European Policy Centre (EPC).

Through this High-Level Policy Event, ESGO aims to mobilise political and institutional support around these recommendations and to encourage coordinated, concrete action at both EU and national level.
