A global physician survey opens September 2026

ABOUT THE COMMISSION

The Lancet Commission on Ovarian Cancer brings together 24 commissioners and 11 collaborators from around the world, co-chaired by Prof. Isabelle Ray-Coquard and Dr Kathleen Moore. Its mission is to synthesize current knowledge, identify critical gaps in care, and deliver actionable policy recommendations to reduce mortality and close inequities in ovarian cancer outcomes worldwide.

THE CHALLENGE

Absence of effective screening

5th

leading cause of cancer death in women worldwide

Late stage at diagnosis

~75%

of cases diagnosed at an advanced stage (III-IV)

Inequities

~70%

of all diagnoses occur in low-and middle-income countries

WHY YOUR VOICE MATTERS

Every day, healthcare professionals make decisions that shape the lives of women with ovarian cancer. Your experience provides insights that clinical trials or administrative data alone cannot capture. This September, you will be invited to complete a global survey. By sharing your perspective, you will help identify unmet needs, advance our understanding of real-world practice, and guide future research. By participating, you will join colleagues worldwide in generating evidence that drives meaningful improvements in ovarian cancer care.

ABOUT THE SURVEY

- Takes about 30 minutes to complete
- Covers your clinical setting, prevention practices, and management approach
- Your responses will directly inform the Commission's global policy recommendations
